

Bio:

Jennifer Takagi is an Executive Leadership and Communication Coach who teaches leaders how to play well at work so they can drive better performance from people they lead, increase profitability and create a purposeful workplace where people want to come and play - productively. After a stellar 30-year career in the housing industry, Jennifer was given the opportunity to relocate or retire. Being a native Oklahoman the decision was simple, retire. As soon as that decision was made, Jennifer jumped off that bridge into doing what she loves best, speaking and training. Sharing what she learned along the way, she helps build better teams and relationships. So far, she has shared her experiences with over five thousand individuals and more than 50 organizations. Her other passion is baking and she recently launched a baking business, Pie Love You Desserts.

Most recently, she has earned designations as Certified Professional Behavioral Analyst facilitating the DISC Behavioral Profile Workshops, Change Style Indicator Facilitator, Coaching Specialist, Best Selling Amazon.com Author (3 TIMES!) and a Certified Trainer for Jack Canfield's Success Principles. He's the brilliant mind behind the Chicken Soup for the Soul book series.

Thriving in the Midst of Change! So much angst is created because of change initiatives. If you could navigate the road to implementing change more effectively, your stress would be reduced and your productivity increased because you wouldn't spend so much time cleaning up the messes created by misunderstandings surrounding the change. Let's look at how to Thrive in the Midst of Change!
