HR 5143-221: Human Resources for the Human Relations Professional

Course Description:

This course will provide an introduction to the general area of human resource management and development in the United States. A major goal of this course is to prepare professional administrators and human relations professionals, who by virtue of their education, outlook, and commitment, will be better qualified for human resource management and general managerial positions in either the public, private, or non-profit sector. Therefore, the following factors will be addressed in either the lectures, discussions, required readings, presentations and the take-home group-based final examination: 1) appropriate knowledge areas of human resource management and development (human resource policy development--socioeconomic and political legal influences; human resource management--human capital planning and forecasting; position classification; pay administration; human resource recruitment and selection; organizational development and productivity--training, reward systems, morale, motivation, productivity measurement, performance appraisal; employee rights and obligations--legal rights and liabilities, moral and ethical components of human resource management behavior; labor management relations--unions, dispute settlement techniques, collective bargaining processes; and grievances and appeals); 2) assistance in human resource management skill building--problem solving skills and interpersonal skills (use of simulation/role playing exercises, case studies, demonstrations, diagnostic and problem-solving exercises, assessment center simulations, and visual aids); 3) examination of human resource management attitudes and trends; and 4) facilitation of professional competency development.

In addition, readings and presentations in the area of diversity in the workplace, the aging work force, gay and lesbian issues in the workplace, and the salient issues of racial, disability, gender, appearance prejudice and discrimination, downsizing, and utilization of the part-time and contingent labor force will be topics of focused group discussions. Further, the major issues of family-work interface, pay fairness, employee rights and discipline, AIDS, drug testing, violence, and the general area of flexibility (benefits, pay, work location, scheduling, etc.) will be addressed.

Student must check in with instructor upon enrollment

2. Meyer, C.K., Noe, L., Geerts, J., & Frank, G. (2009). Managing people as assets. Des Moines, IA: Millennium HRM Press. ISBN 9780977088126. Due to recent and major web difficulties with the ISBN Code for this book on Amazon, the instructor suggests you order directly from Follett.

Note: Follett is the Advanced Programs contractual textbook provider. Should text changes become necessary after publication of the course syllabus, Advanced Programs will facilitate text returns/refunds only for texts purchased through Follett.

Course Objectives:

1. To analyze selected problems of human resource management by utilizing the case study methodology, simulations, and other experiential learning techniques.
2. To present a set of cases and situations which are likely to reflect some of the concerns which managers may become involved in during the course of their work experience.
3. To examine some of the pressures, conflicts, and uncertainties which confront the manager and which impact upon organizational behavior, such as the cultural, structural, political, ethical, economic, educational, and technological factors.
4. To develop a realization that organizational or bureaucratic behavior is a very complex phenomenon and that there are seldom any clearly "right" or "wrong" answers available to the administrator.
5. To prepare professional managers, who by virtue of their education, outlook, and commitment will be better qualified for human resource and general management positions in the three economic sectors.
6. To discuss the appropriate knowledge areas of human resource management, ranging from the socioeconomic and political-legal influences to issues centered on recruitment, motivation, productivity measurement, performance appraisal, employee rights, morale, training and career development, reward systems, and the moral and ethical aspects of human resource management.
7. To assist in human resource management and interpersonal skill building through the use of problem-solving exercises, simulations, and role playing situations.
8. To deal with workplace/force issues that are of concern to contemporary managers regardless of sector of employment.
9. To present a set of readings which are likely to reflect some of the real-life situations that administrators and managers may become involved in during the course of their work experience.
10. To deal with practical and implementable solutions which human resource managers can apply in their organizations with a reasonable probability of working well enough to improve the organizational environment.
11. To deal with topics not traditionally covered in traditional human resource management texts and focus on current problems and practical solutions.

12. To facilitate the development of a high performance organization that produces world-class quality products and services and utilizes highly trained people operating in self-managed teams.
13. To help develop the realization that staggering losses result in productivity, quality, and profits when poor health and mental illness among employees are not aggressively prevented.
14. To realize that in the drive for high performance and quality, American organizations are under increasing pressure to become more culturally, socially, ethnically, racially, and gender diverse.
15. To develop an appreciation that human resource management takes place within the complexity of the legal, regulatory, managerial, and organizational contexts of employee productivity and product quality, and that every organization's environment experiences continuous dynamism, cycles of change and adaptation.

Assignments, Grading and Due Dates (please read carefully):

Several student-related obligations are assumed:

1. attend all course seminar sessions, unless specific and individual approval of absence is granted by the instructor;
2. complete all required readings;
3. complete all course-related assignments;
4. participate qualitatively in class discussions and other course-related activities (simulations, exercises, etc.); and
5. complete the final examination requirements.

The lectures will provide a great deal of additional material and, therefore, you should be prepared to take notes and integrate this material with your required readings.

Listed below you will find the chapters that are included in the custom packet and the case study book by Meyer et.al. You will be assigned with one of your colleagues to analyze and evaluate one chapter and present the major concepts and ideas to the class. Email the instructor at Kenneth.meyer@drake.edu for your assigned chapter. After you have carefully re-read the chapter that you have been assigned, be prepared to discuss the key or salient issues with the class on a designated evening. It will be your responsibility to present a synthesis of the key points in the chapter and then prepare a summary (2 or 3 pages, typed, etc.) to be distributed to all class members. This approach will provide a useful method for class participants to integrate the substantive areas of human resources management and development with their own experiences in this important professional and academic area.

Next, you will lead a discussion with the class over the significance of the material presented in relation to contemporary human resources management and administration. The type of presentation you make may vary from a standard presentation with transparencies, PowerPoint presentation, and other materials to be distributed in class, to audio-video, simulation exercises, etc., which you feel will enable you to best present the material. Time will be made available during the first day of class to begin your presentation preparation.

Therefore, it is necessary that you have read all of the readings in the custom packet prior to the first day of class. If you have not read all the material and noted which points are important and the like, you will not be fully prepared to participate and make the needed contribution to the class.

Grading:

This is a letter-graded course: A, B, C, D or F. Ninety (90) percent = grade of A; 80-89 percent = grade of B; 70-79 percent = grade of C. A combination of factors will be used in arriving at a final evaluation for students, such as:

Assignment	Due Date	Percent of Grade
Quality of class participation	During class sessions	20
Written summary of assigned book chapter(s)	Third class session	30
Case study presentation(s) on assigned case studies	Draft due first class session; Final due third class session	20
Final, take-home examination	Two weeks from last class session, July 1, 2018	30

Notice: Failure to meet assignment due dates could result in a grade of I (Incomplete) and may adversely impact Tuition Assistance and/or Financial Aid.

POLICIES AND NOTICES

Attendance/Grade Policy

Attendance and participation in interaction, individual assignments, group exercises, simulations, role playing, etc. are valuable aspects of any course because much of the learning comes from discussions in class with other students. It is expected that you attend all classes and be on time except for excused emergencies.

Excused absences are given for professor mandated activities or legally required activities such as emergencies or military assignments. It is the policy of the University to excuse absences of students that result from religious observances and to provide without penalty for the rescheduling of examinations and additional required class work that may fall on religious holidays. Unavoidable personal emergencies, including (but not limited to) serious illness; delays in getting to class because of accidents, etc.; deaths and funerals, and hazardous road conditions will be excused.

If you are obtaining financial assistance (TA, STAP, FA, VA, Scholarship, etc.) to pay all or part of your tuition cost, you must follow your funding agency/institution's policy regarding "I" (Incomplete) grades unless the timeline is longer than what the University policy allows then you must adhere to the University policy. Students who receive Financial Aid must resolve/complete any "I" (Incomplete) grades by the end of the term or he/she may be placed on "financial aid probation." If the "I" grade is not resolved/completed by the end of the following term, the student's Financial Aid may be suspended making the student ineligible for further Financial Aid.

Students are responsible for meeting the guidelines of Tuition Assistance and Veterans Assistance. See the education counselor at your local education center for a complete description of your TA or VA requirements.

Academic Integrity and Student Conduct

Academic integrity means honesty and responsibility in scholarship. Academic assignments exist to help students learn; grades exist to show how fully this goal is attained. Therefore all work and all grades should result from the student's own understanding and effort.

Academic misconduct is any act which improperly affects the evaluation of a student's academic performance or achievement. Misconduct occurs when the student either knows or reasonably should know that the act constitutes misconduct. Academic misconduct includes: cheating and using unauthorized materials on examinations and other assignments; improper collaboration, submitting the same assignment for different classes (self-plagiarism); fabrication, forgery, alteration of documents, lying, etc...in order to obtain an academic advantage; assisting others in academic misconduct; attempting to commit academic misconduct; destruction of property, hacking, etc...; intimidation and interference with integrity process; and plagiarism. All students should review the Student's Guide to Academic Integrity at http://integrity.ou.edu/students_guide.html

Students and faculty each have responsibility for maintaining an appropriate learning environment. All students should review policies regarding student conduct at <http://studentconduct.ou.edu/>

Accommodation Statement

The University of Oklahoma is committed to making its activities as accessible as possible. For accommodations on the basis of disability, please contact your local OU Site Director.

Adjustment for Pregnancy/Childbirth-Related Issues

Should you need modifications or adjustments to your course requirements because of documented pregnancy-related or childbirth-related issues, please contact me as soon as possible to discuss. Generally, modifications will be made where medically necessary and similar in scope to accommodations based on temporary disability. Please see <http://www.ou.edu/content/eoo/faqs/pregnancy-faqs.html>.

Title IX Resources

For any concerns regarding gender-based discrimination, sexual harassment, sexual misconduct, stalking, or intimate partner violence, the University offers a variety of resources, including advocates on-call 24/7, counseling services, mutual no-contact orders, scheduling adjustments, and disciplinary sanctions against the perpetrator. Please contact the Sexual Misconduct Office at smo@ou.edu or (405) 325-2215 (8-5), or the Sexual Assault Response Team at (405) 615 -0013 (24/7) to report an incident. To learn more about Title IX, please visit the Institutional Equity Office's website at <http://www.ou.edu/content/eoo.html>

Course Policies

Advanced Programs policy is to order books in paperback if available. Courses, dates, and professors are subject to change. Please check with your OU Site Director. Students should retain a copy of any assignments that are mailed to the professor for the course. Advanced Programs does not provide duplicating services or office supplies.

Any and all course materials, syllabus, lessons, lectures, etc. are the property of professor teaching the course and the Board of Regents of the University of Oklahoma and are protected under applicable copyright.
